

NEW DAWSON CITY HOSPITAL

Designed in association with Stantec Architecture of Vancouver, construction of the new 24/7 hospital commenced in 2010. The new 3,200 square metre facility will replace the existing 9 to 5 health centre and will allow for a substantial increase in the delivery of health services in the community.

DAWSON CITY, YUKON

The new structure will be the largest building in the historic city centre and was required to conform to the stringent requirements with the Heritage District Guidelines established by the City of Dawson. The new building pays homage to some historic structures and details from the past and attempts to act as a backdrop to the neighbouring and national historically significant Old Territorial Administration Building (OTAB) now known as the Dawson City Museum.
