

This project included the renovation and relocation of the existing 390 square metre heritage Round House to a waterfront site across from the MacBride Museum. In disrepair for many years, the train storage building has recently been used by the Miles Canyon Historical Railway Society for the storage of the waterfront trolley.

Along with the relocation to a more visible waterfront site, the renovated building includes a new 55 square metre addition, providing office space and washrooms for use by the railway society.
